Thus, when a judge acts in his official capacity and condemns a criminal to death, that is not his office and work, but God's. For we are not teaching out of our own head and reason or wisdom, nor are we seeking our own advantage, property or honor thereby before the world; but we preach and praise only God's word and his doings. Therefore we must not let this word lie so cold and simple, but inflate it well and magnify it, and set it in opposition to all persecution ; thus we will see and learn that all our suffering is to be despised as nothing at all, in contrast with this great consolation and eternal blessing. FirstName. Martin Luther's commentary upon the Sermon on the Mount is lively, informed, and a perfect gateway to the writings of the great Renaissance theologian and Bible scholar. But that is not what constitutes being pure, said he ; but those I praise who take pains to be of a pure heart, as he says.
