Although the environment may be a concern of indigenous peoples, identity-based concerns has at times outweighed ecological concerns within the extractive development dilemma Lalander Security Dilemma A security dilemma refers to a situation wherein two or more states are drawn into conflict, possibly even war, over security concerns, even though none of the states actually desire conflict.

International discussions are more pluralistic, and international decisions. Analyzing the transformation of the British and French elites, Lachmann considers the Reformation as a moment of "strategic breakthrough" in European history, but, unlike Weber, sees this process not so much as an ideological, but rather as a structural transformation. It was remarkably difficult, even with the backing of laboratory science, to establish a consensus on the risks of refuse disposal. Soft Power Theory Suggested text for this entry welcome.

It is by nature opposed to ultranationalism, jingoism and national chauvinism. Other names are more intimately associated with this topic, on which the two senior authors have collaborated since sanctions became a favored tool of statecraft in the s. Furthermore, rather than privileging the production and contestation of scientific knowledge in itself, we attempt to put the operation of that knowledge into the context of the social relations of everyday life.
