Thus I believe it was Soviet social engineering that began the concept that there is an Moldovan language and identity distinctly independent from the Romanian language and identity. It is so in our tongue, and it is notably the case in the German. I heard of an Englishman who knocked at a man's door in Heidelberg and proposed, in the best German he could command, to "verheirathen" that house. I consider this capitalizing of nouns a good idea, because by reason of it you are almost always able to tell a noun the minute you see it.
